Regional Fellowship Program

The SDICCCA Regional Fellowship Program has been highly recognized by the San Diego and Imperial County Communities as one of the most effective training programs for community college faculty over 20 years. It has also been recognized by the California Community College Chancellors office for its contribution to diversity. The regional faculty fellowship program is a major cooperative initiative between SDICCCA and San Diego State University (SDSU). Partnerships include ten community colleges in San Diego County, Imperial County, and Riverside County. The purpose of the program is to identify, recruit, train, and support prospective community college classroom, library, and counseling faculty as well as those interested in student success and equity positions in their pursuit of part-time and full-time employment within community colleges in the region while contributing to the creation of a more diverse faculty on our campuses. The program requires fellows to enroll in post-graduate courses through SDSU College of Extended Studies, attend 10 seminars throughout the year, and meet with a mentor for 6-10 hours per week.

Our program strives to:

- Introduce graduate students, recent graduates, and industry professionals to the community college environment and student population.
- Arrange successful mentoring relationships that support the development and professional growth of both fellows and mentors.
- Provide training for fellows emphasizing evidence-based pedagogy, assessment of student learning outcomes, strategies for providing students with basic skills, strategies to engage a diverse population of adult learners in the learning process, and utilizing data driven inquiry in the reflection of our practices.
- Describe to fellows job search techniques as well as address important issues regarding community college policy and decision-making.
- Nurture the highest levels of integrity and ethics in every aspect of the fellow's professional life
- Create a database of current and former fellows to enable participating community colleges to recruit for part-time and full-time faculty positions.
