Background Information: The Tijuana-San Diego border region is slowly turning into a single metropolitan area of over 3 million inhabitants. The unique economic, political, and social characteristics of this region offer tremendous learning opportunities; particularly under the current political climate. Through border immersion trips, we create spaces for the Tijuana and San Diego communities to gather, learn from each other and build sustainable relationships of growth and understanding.

Community Engagement Responsibilities/Activities: Students will spend the day with community partners in Tijuana or San Diego. Special emphasis will be made on the experience of youth who reside in the border region, particularly in terms of their education. Active participation facilitating workshops and activities for youth is required, more details to be explained at orientation sessions. Learning and growth result from building relationships and engaging with individuals who have experienced first hand the opportunities and struggles of life in a border region.
